

6516209654.txt

I choose satellite radio because it offers me programming that local stations no longer find profitable. I pay a premium for this service and expect to have weather and traffic info from this service if available. It's now available to me and the radio stations that no longer want my business (by no longer offering programming I desire in a format I like) seem to think they have the right to deny this service. Making local info illegal across satellite radio is bad for competition and will not bring ratings back to old thinking corporate radio stations that would rather spend money on lobbying than providing programming for everybody.

Michael Scheliga